DIRECTOR'S MESSAGE

Season of Thanksgiving

I found myself confiding in my son, River, while contemplating this piece. He is at the age when days blur into months and months into years - and before you know it 'the seasons, they go round and round.' River's thought was that he would set me up with his colored pencils and easel, and "do art" while I wrote. This was at 9:15 pm and he was probably right; I could have written this piece freehand and with colored pencils, sketching the autumnal colors surrounding Channels Marsh at Rogers Center. (Here's a photo of River, enjoying treats after last month's annual 'Animals of Halloween'.)

As we transition with the changing seasons and focus our thoughts on Veteran's Day and Thanksgiving, let's congratulate ourselves with a collective pat on the back and a well-deserved 'thank you' for making Rogers Environmental Education Center the success it is today. In early September, we surpassed our 10,000 annual visitor goal inside the Center - and we continue moving towards the 11,000 guest mark. (Note that this tally does not include daily hikers on the trails.) Hosting more than 10,000 people at the Visitor Center is quantifiable evidence of the tremendous affection that many throughout Central NY have for Rogers Center. Storytime and Hike, hosted by Jenni Larchar every Wednesday at 10 am, remains a popular program for preschoolers and their caregivers. For children ages two and three, our unique preschool program Nature's Nursery is held each Wednesday and Friday from 8 - 10 am. Recently, a member remarked about "Rogers Kids," and how she has always enjoyed watching children grow up at Rogers Center and progress throughout their years; I think our staff would agree! In addition to little tyke programming, our on-staff environmental educator, Sarah Freedman, has provided educational programs to thirty different school districts this year. Nearly 1,000 children have visited the grounds for on-site field trips, while nearly double this amount have participated in classroom/school-based programs. On behalf of our full-time and part-time staff of five, numerous interns, and board members, I wish to say 'Thank You!' Thank you for cooking your barbecues and hosting your family reunions at Rogers Center, and for bringing your grandchildren out to birdwatch behind one of the blinds, and for packing that lunch which you wished you had packed more of after hiking one of our many beautiful trails. As leaves continue to fall and snowflakes begin to fly, Rogers Center remains your all-season, unplugged option for brief mid-week walks and leisurely weekend hikes - whether it be a solo getaway or a time with family and friends. Remember, cross-country skis and snowshoes will be available to rent by Thanksgiving - or sooner, if it comes to that! 'And the seasons they go round and round...'

See you on the trails,

Ask Friends of Rogers

Dear Friends of Rogers,

Upon visiting your visitor's center recently I bought some fish food to feed the fish. I noticed later the sticker that said not to feed the geese. Why is that?

Sincerely, Fish Feeder

Dear Fish Feeder,

We ask that you do not feed the geese for many reasons. While the fish food is made for the fish we do not sell food that is meant for geese. Regular feeding of the geese with food that is not natural for them is harmful to them. It can cause poor nutrition, increased hybridization, water pollution, delayed migration, concentrations at unnatural sites, overcrowding, spread of disease, costly management efforts, unnatural behavior, cumulative effects and devaluation of the species.

When people feed geese they usually feed them bread, corn, popcorn and other things that are low in protein and very poor substitutes for natural foods. This means that they are eating the food people are giving them instead of going to find food that will give them protein and provide better nutrition. Also, when geese are fed by people the food is usually scattered on the ground where they defecate. They are then eating this food, which helps to spread diseases between the geese.

So as you can see, feeding the geese does more harm than good. This is why we discourage feeding the geese. You can still enjoy geese by watching and observing them. Thank you for asking this important question!

Sincerely,
Friends of Rogers

EDUCATOR'S MESSAGE

Scope for Imagination

Spruce Ridge Trail is one of our many interesting paths to hike here at Rogers Environmental Education Center. There are frequently fresh gnaw marks on the many trees that line the trail. Next time you walk Spruce Ridge, stop and get a closer look ... you may be able to feel the teeth marks left by beavers on the stumps! When searching for these marks near the trail's edge, watch out for smaller, sharp stumps that might be hidden in the leaves. Another unique feature to look for is the big hole just off the main trail. Many people wonder what it is, and who, or what, created it. Some of my favorite explanations I've heard from younger visitors are: big foot dug the hole; it is a dinosaur footprint; that's a bear cave for the winter; buried treasure is hidden here. Other visitors might presume that a large tree was growing there, and when it fell over, the roots were ripped right out of the ground and left that gaping hollow.

This big hole is actually a soil pit, dug by people to observe the different horizons (layers) of the soil. Scouting groups have occasionally studied the pit, and when regional Envirothon events are held at Rogers Center, it is used for various challenges. Our soil pit on Spruce Ridge Trail has a special educational purpose and is great for the imagination. Just the other day, in fact, children from Nature's Nursery even claim to have caught a giant fish!
