

Friends of Rogers Trail Descriptions

Boundary Trail

A short loop off Channels, Boundary is a good add-on to your hike. It gives you a view of the Chenango River and weaves in and out of forest, meadow, and marshy areas. The terrain is fairly even and not prone to flooding.

Channels Trail

The most popular trail, Channels skirts around the Channels Marsh. There are a few places to see the water and its wildlife up close with some duck blinds, an overlook, and a secondary trail over the water. Channels has some areas that get muddy or have puddles after rain but the terrain is flat.

North Loop Trail

This spur is a quick jaunt to add on to Channels. The trail goes through a spruce grove, it is flat, dry, and easy to walk.

Spruce Ridge Trail

This trail is short but has a lot to see. Spruce Ridge is hilly and offers a nice view of the Cunningham Ice Pond and beaver activity. The trail is well drained but does have some wooden bridges that get slick in rain.

South Trail

Get off the beaten path with South Trail. It leads away from the heart of the Rogers property and along the Chenango River. There are some muddy spots after rain but the trail is flat with some gravel stretches.
